

That's Your Modern Life

I know a woman named Rosa
She calls me all the time
She says she is my hermana
But her face doesn't look like mine

She says we are all god's children - that's the light that's in her eyes
She says we are naked pilgrims - that's the light, that's the light
She says you are one in a million - that's the light that's in your eyes
And gives me something to believe in - that's the light, that's the light

I could use some inspiration
Something to open up my eyes
This darkness is contagious
It's a never ending night

So that's when I think about Rosa - and the light that's in her eyes
And the way that her face shines - that's the light, that's the light
It lifts me up from the sofa - that's the light that's in her eyes
And I suddenly feel fine - that's the light, that's the light
I am an analog human
Living in digital times
I'm trying to keep my humor
Without losing my mind

I'm going to move to Baltimore - that's your modern life today
And live on the avenue - that's your modern life
And live with that woman from Ecuador - that's your modern life today
And write a song about it too - that's your modern life

Copyright © 2017 Steve Johnson. All Rights Reserved.